Richmond, VA – Department of General Services Director Chris Beschler announced today that some areas of Capitol Square will be impacted this week as crews film the television show Mercy Street: Season Two.

Crews began laying mulch along the walkway around the South Portico of the Capitol on Monday for use of horse-drawn carriages. Filming will occur around Capitol Square and inside the Capitol on Tuesday, and crews will remove all equipment and mulch on Wednesday.

Senate Clerk Susan Schaar and House Clerk G. Paul Nardo said some areas on the second and third floors of the Capitol will be inaccessible during filming on Tuesday. Capitol Square will remain open during filming.

Governor McAuliffe announced earlier this year that the Civil War drama series, which premiered in January, would be returning to Virginia for its second season of filming. Season one also was filmed in Central Virginia.
